TRADE REPORT.

THE export of rice from this port is somewhat below the average of the last nine years, owing to the embargo placed on its export from the 23rd September, 1877, to 18th January, 1878.

The Treaties which Siam has entered into with foreign countries allow her Government to prohibit the export of this article whenever a scarcity is apprehended. This right has only been enforced on one previous occasion, viz., from the 25th January, 1865, to the 21st August of the same year.

In 1865 the crop was really short, owing to drought in the principal rice-growing districts. There was, however, little or no suffering on the part of the people, as far as sufficiency of food was concerned, nor did the price of rice exceed that which it usually amounts to when there is a real demand for it.

Last year there was no scarcity, for the crop turned out to be quite up to the average. I do not think that there ever existed sufficient grounds for enforcing an embargo on the staple article of commerce of this country. What took place was this. Between July and August the rains in the vicinity of Bangkok were undoubtedly less than usual, and I believe that something similar occurred in one or two of the least important rice-growing districts. On the other hand, in those districts where three-fourths of the crop are usually sown, there was every reason to believe that it would be at least up to the average; nevertheless, as there was a party in existence who believed it to be their interest to stop the export, an embargo was placed thereon, the usual month's notice having been previously given. No sooner was the notice given than all rushed in to buy; for men, when they are either particularly anxious to acquire money in haste or fearful of losing it, frequently suffer from a blindness said to overcome those in love. No notice was taken of the fact that the growers of paddy were ready to meet any demands made on them, though they undoubtedly were the best judges as to the state of the crops, and would certainly have been loth to part with their stocks had they not had ample reason to believe that they would be speedily replaced. As both buyers and sellers were equally anxious to deal, the amount exported in the month, during which the above-mentioned notice ran, was quite equal to that sent out of the country in an average quarter of the year. In the meantime news was coming in from many quarters that the crops were good; as, however, nearly all the traders in the place were interested in the stocks, which owing to their excess over the usual quantity exported remained unsold at Singapore and other ports, a large party was added to those who began the game, and the embargo was enforced.

The principal losers by the embargo were, of course, the steamers running between this port, Singapore, and Hong Kong, which are for the most part British; they had to seek employment elsewhere. Fortunately, they returned as soon as the embargo was withdrawn; for the regularity with which they run, and the advantages which they give to shippers in regard to speedy returns, have had a great influence in extending the commerce of this place.

It is evident by what I have stated that this power of placing an embargo on the export of rice ought to be used with considerable more caution than on this occasion. Nothing is more likely to injure the trade of a port than such a needless interference as the one complained of above. Should it occur again, it might be necessary, as much for the interest of Siam as of those foreigners engaged in her trade, to move for a revision of the Treaty, and place some check on power which is so liable to be abused.

It is satisfactory to find that the export of rice is gradually but surely increasing. Thus, while for the eight years ended 1869 the export averaged 1,781,567 piculs, for the eight years ended 1877 the average has been 2,552,705 piculs; nevertheless one must not be blind to the fact that both British Burmah and Saigon, particularly the former, increase their exports much more speedily than we do, and that, consequently, we are yearly losing ground as compared with those countries. Little, if anything, can be done, at least directly, as the laws in reference to land in Siam and the export duty leave little to be complained of. But I have yet to see any Eastern native Government which really looks after the interests of its people, although we have all read of some instances where there are grounds for supposing this has been the case. It is unnecessary to go into the reasons why this should be almost invariably the case, though there would be little difficulty in giving them. But while the export of rice in Siam is increasing, I fear the profits hitherto derived by the Europeans engaged in the business are seriously on the decrease. Up till very lately foreigners were the sole owners of rice-cleaning mills, which also until lately have been highly remunerative. Now, however, the indefatigable Chinese are setting up mills, and as they are not only the principal owners of rice milled at the European mills, but likewise enter into arrangements in regard to freight, insurance, and other matters with their owners, any change in such transactions must be a loss to the Europeans. As the mills owned by Europeans and others are being set up in the rice-producing districts, it is to be feared that before long we shall hear of crops being mortgaged for advances, and other evils, which are almost certain to end ultimately very disastrously to the cultivators.

I have pointed out the danger to the Government, and a law has been passed which may prevent the evil; but laws in Siam are more readily passed than enforced. I much fear that harm, rather than benefit, will be effected by these newly-located mills. If, however, the evil can be averted, their presence in the country will be highly beneficial.

SHIPPING REPORT.

We have now two British steamers running regularly between this port and Hong Kong. They make the passage generally under eight days, and are beginning to reap the benefit due to their enterprize, as they now come back full of cargo from China. Previously to their being put on the rice steamers from China came here empty. They are also well fitted for Chinese passengers, and generally have a considerable number on board both in going and returning.

English steamers, however, labour under a disadvantage in regard to Chinese passengers as compared with those of foreign countries; for they have to be fitted on purpose to carry them, and are limited as to the number they take on board. Foreign steamers carry as many as they please.

We have also two English steamers running between here and Singapore, besides a Siamese steamer. Here, again, the British steamers come under a rule not applicable to foreign ones. They have to go into dock twice a-year, where the Siamese vessel finds once quite sufficient, although running just as regularly. The fact is, that the change from the sea-water to that of the river cleans the bottoms of iron vessels if properly painted, and they can well run for at least a year.

For many years past we have had little, I may almost say no trouble, with British seamen in this port. I attribute this entirely to persistent refusals to allow men to be discharged. The fact is, when discharges are easily granted every discontented man makes a row on purpose to get one, and is encouraged to do so by grog shopkeepers on shore, who have men in their debt whom they wish to ship in order to secure their advances. Masters of vessels, too, often wish to get rid of men simply because they do not like them. I am glad to see that by the instructions issued to Consuls, dated August 1877, ample power is given them to put a check on the needless discharge of seamen.
