The PROJECT ON THE ECONOMIC HISTORY OF SOUTHEAST ASIA was established in 1988 by the Research School of Pacific Studies of the Australian National University, Canberra. It is premised on the conviction that the varied contemporary economic performance of Southeast Asia cannot be understood without reference to its past, and that a concentration on this neglected area will provide an important input into Southeast Asian Studies on the one hand, and a better understanding of the development process on the other. The Project Convener is Anthony Reid, and its Research Coordinator is Anne Booth.

The Project's DATA PAPERS SERIES: SOURCES FOR THE ECONOMIC HISTORY OF SOUTHEAST ASIA, will help to provide the data necessary for broader analytical work. It will make available in English, and in contemporary metric measures, statistical data, contemporary description, and pioneering scholarship currently inaccessible to most analysts because of the diversity of languages, measures and locations in which it is found. It welcomes translations of sources and long statistical time series.

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is the first in a series of Data Papers sponsored by the Economic History of Southeast Asia Project in the Research School of Pacific Studies at the Australian National University. The main function of these Data Papers will be as research aids, both to the writers of the book-length studies which the Project will produce, and to other scholars interested in the long-term economic development of Southeast Asia. The Data Paper series will include bibliographies, statistical series, translations of important documents from both European and Southeast Asian languages, and reprints of important material in English which has long been out of print or difficult for scholars to access.

Long statistical time series are crucial for monitoring the economic progress of any country or region, and the construction of such time series for all the major economic and social indicators for each of the countries of Southeast Asia will be a crucial part of the Project's research. This bibliography is intended to show where statistics can be obtained to construct such time series, from the latter half of the 18th century to the present day. It has been compiled primarily for people using Australian libraries, and especially those located in Canberra. Although the authors have tried to include important publications not available in Australia, it is inevitable that some valuable material has been missed. We would be most grateful if colleagues in other parts of the world can tell us about such material, so it can be included in subsequent editions of the bibliography. We are already grateful to Charles Lindsey and Pierre Brocheux for supplying us with valuable information on holdings at Yale University and in France.

In compiling the bibliography we have restricted ourselves to published material which contains important statistical series. Archival material is excluded, although there can be little doubt that many "buried treasures" of a statistical nature lie in the archives of Britain, France, the Netherlands and the USA. Again we would be grateful if scholars working in these archives could let us know of any important material which might be brought to the attention of other researchers. As our aim has been to catalogue primary statistical source material, we have also excluded all secondary works which make use of statistical material, but do not themselves contain any statistical series which are not available elsewhere.

Much of the tedious work of locating the material and entering the publication details was done by Jennifer Brewster, while she was still a member of the Department of Pacific and Southeast Asian History. Anne Booth took up the work where Jennifer left off, and completed the initial draft. Radin Fernando assisted in providing details of Dutch material on Indonesia, located in Jakarta, Australia and the Netherlands. Kristine Alilunas-Rodgers and Evelyn Winburn spent many painstaking hours checking entries and performing other editorial chores. Evelyn Winburn also managed to convert the original files prepared by Jennifer Brewster to MS Word on the Apple Macintosh, and developed the Vietnamese and romanised Thai fonts for the final publication.

We are grateful for assistance with the Thai entries from Lek McFadden of the Australian National Library and Sumontha Miller of the Menzies Library, ANU. Helpful advice and assistance have also been provided by Malcolm Falkus, Bob Langdon, B. Terweil, John Drabble, David Marr and Phuong Tonthat.

GUIDE TO USING THE BIBLIOGRAPHY

The original spelling, capitalisation and diacritics of titles have been retained, with all the variations that have existed over a period of a hundred-odd years in some cases.

To the greatest extent possible, material has been arranged in order of the date of the statistics included, rather than by date of publication. The date in square brackets refers to the year in which the statistical data contained in the source commence. A question mark indicates uncertainty regarding the starting or finishing date of a particular series.

Library cataloguing information has been given for the libraries listed below.

INDOCHINA

"During French colonial rule, population surveys ('évaluations') were conducted throughout Indochina in 1906, 1921, 1926, 1931, and 1936, and a census ('recensement') of the European and assimilated population was conducted in 1937. Except for the results of the survey of 1906, the official reports (if ever published) are difficult to locate; they are probably at the Archives centrales de l'Indochine, in the Dépôt des Archives d'Outre-Mer in Aix-en-Provence.

"The Democratic Republic of Vietnam conducted censuses in 1960 and in 1974. Unofficial reports of the statistics are cited below because the official government reports could not be located.

"The Republic of Vietnam never conducted a census, although it conducted surveys in 1958 and in 1967. The statistics published in the Statistical Yearbooks are taken from birth and death registrations in the areas controlled by the RVN." (Vietnam: A guide to reference sources, by Michael Cotter). The PROJECT ON THE ECONOMIC HISTORY OF SOUTHEAST ASIA was established in 1988 by the Research School of Pacific Studies of the Australian National University, Canberra. It is premised on the conviction that the varied contemporary economic performance of Southeast Asia cannot be understood without reference to its past, and that a concentration on this neglected area will provide an important input into Southeast Asian Studies on the one hand, and a better understanding of the development process on the other. The Project Convener is Anthony Reid, and its Research Coordinator is Anne Booth.

The Project's DATA PAPERS SERIES: SOURCES FOR THE ECONOMIC HISTORY OF SOUTHEAST ASIA, will help to provide the data necessary for broader analytical work. It will make available in English, and in contemporary metric measures, statistical data, contemporary description, and pioneering scholarship currently inaccessible to most analysts because of the diversity of languages, measures and locations in which it is found. It welcomes translations of sources and long statistical time series.

- No. 1. J. Brewster & A. Booth, Bibliography of statistical sources on Southeast Asia, 1750-1990.
- No. 2. R. Fernando, Chinese economic activity in Indonesia, 1800-1940: Selected Dutch writings.
